

THANK YOU to all PEO VOLUNTEERS

Building confidence, competence, connections and community

Celebrate the Value of Volunteering—Building Confidence, Competence, Connections and Community

The theme of National Volunteer Week 2018 is Celebrate the Value of Volunteering—Building Confidence, Competence, Connections and Community. It seeks to show how the value in volunteering is reciprocal: for all the time, skills, experience and passion a volunteer devotes to help others, they get much in return, such as new skills and meaningful personal connections. Volunteering creates social and economic value for all: for individuals, organizations, professions, communities and, ultimately, for Canada itself.

The value of volunteering is something to be celebrated—especially at an organization like Professional Engineers Ontario (PEO), which relies heavily on more than 1000 volunteers to fulfill its mandate of self-regulating the profession in the public interest.

Let's explore this theme through the prism of PEO:

Building Confidence: PEO's primary goal is to build and maintain the public's confidence in its ability to protect the public through capable and effective self-regulation. PEO volunteers are key to this—from Academic Requirements Committee members reviewing applicant qualifications for licensure and Complaints Committee members investigating and considering complaints against licence holders to the Discipline Committee, which disciplines practitioners found guilty of professional misconduct or incompetence.

Building Competence: As a regulator, PEO is in a constant state of continuous improvement and it seeks the same for the profession and licence holders. PEO volunteers help to build competence by working with engineering schools to improve curricula; looking for ways to improve PEO organizational efficiencies; and ensuring licence holders are competent to practice.

Building Connections: PEO works with several stakeholder partners in its regulatory work—the public, government, partner engineering bodies and businesses. PEO volunteers are important touchpoints in creating and maintaining these connections. For example, Government Liaison Program volunteers meet regularly with politicians to facilitate strong relationships, monitor legislative proposals that potentially impact the profession, and express PEO policy positions to decision makers.

Building Community: PEO chapters are champions of the profession within their communities. Chapter volunteers work with local students to educate them on engineering principles and the potential of engineering careers; partner with organizations to create outreach and professional development opportunities for citizens; and represent PEO and the profession at the community level.

While PEO volunteers devote their time and expertise to our profession, I can attest that they get much in return. They enhance their own leadership and organizational skills; expand their professional networks; and learn more about engineering and PEO's role in regulating engineering in Ontario.

Most importantly, they're awarded the opportunity to give back—which is the primary motivator for almost all the volunteers I've met.

Indeed, there is much to celebrate about volunteerism and PEO's volunteers. During National Volunteer Week, be sure to thank a volunteer; and, if you're a volunteer, give yourself a pat on the back.

We're proud to salute and celebrate our volunteers for their selfless work, which enables the engineering profession in Ontario to thrive.

Sincerely,

 P.Eng.
